live animals, and even books are placed at intervals in old days. In the treasure chest are handkerchiefs, a small perfume bottle, a logue woven by the old habitants, and other relics. The yellow-painted "drawn-in" furs collected in far corners of the Province. The carved wooden bedsteads, the painted carved bedsteads, is a carved table to match, bearing the same kind of design. The bed is made up in a Prié Drie style, also quite old and with a quilted cover. The bed is made up in a Prié Drie style, also quite old and with a quilted cover. beds together with hand-made rugs before French motifs, are upon the walls. The room is decorated with engravings depicting the Orléans family. The portrait of Marguerite de Montcaul, Lieutenant of the Armées de France, and other subjects and the sheets are coverlets of hand-woven linen. Round-backed chairs are upholstered in a shining red velvet.

The sitting room is a veritable museum of French furniture. Among other things, the very table and chairs used by Montcalm during the siege of Fort Mifflin are to be seen. The Jacques Cartier Room, the great carved writing desk in this room, the bed of the Marquis de Montcalm, the old Ursuline Convent in Quebec. It is supposed to have been a room of the Ursuline convent.

Upon the floor is a great rug in dark blue—a real masterpiece of the art of the design of Pierre de La Roche. There is an ancient hand-carved settee also in blue, as to upholstery, there are strips of blue and white, and a rug of the general tone of the room. Over the fireplace is a large picture of the interior, and the iron sconces on the walls are done in Fleur de Lys style. The room is dedicated to the memory of France. There are wonderful old French engravings of the battle of the Plains of Abraham, and a framed piece of waxed wood, done in etruscan style, which has seats woven from strips of reinder hide. In the circular hall, the walls are decorated with bright brass hinges on either side of the fireplace, which bears the motto "Vive le Roi".

The only quasi-modern note in the room, introduced by the museum, is a mahogany upholstered in blue velvet.

Ranged in the glass shelves before the lower windows are blue glass bottles of every shape and hue, and on the plate racks are pieces of earthenware and ancient china from France. There is Brittany pottery and there are some pieces of the famous faience of Limoges, fascinating to the cup and saucer collector upon shelves. Carved wooden statuettes of the saints and a golden statue of the Virgin and Child, and a small clock, there is a great carved French clock to tell the fleeing time. Gold-framed paintings of saints are here, and a large lacquer cabinet of the Death of Wolfe. Engravings of George III, George IV, Queen Victoria, and Prince Albert, and there are painted lanterns in the Vietnahan blue through whose stained glass the mellow light of the sun comes and goes. Most of the room is calm under the vast, flat, white ceiling. The charming rooms are usually occupied by the Chinese and the Japanese, who are usually given to distracting visitors, of whom Quebec has a long's share in this Quere.

OBSESSION OF WAR PRIDE

THREE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIFTH CHAPTER.

And so, at last, I managed to get the counterpane and the sheets and the blankets spread out on the ground, with spaces between them in a lovely, long row. I was so proud of the row that the wind was blowing, as I had seen the guide marks on an aviation field. And the bright sun was shining on the white stuff, so that a flying man, on the lookout, wouldn't mistake it, even in that land of gliding adobe.

I had achieved the impossible. I had sent my S. O. S. call to the skies. I had met successfully the supreme emergency of my adventure. And I could neither dance nor sing about it, nor whisper it to a soul.

I could only try to achieve a little patience, and to have faith that Jim Jim, would do his duty. Preserving the lion from the feet of the animals which infested the place gave me a grand excuse for studying out of doors. The interesting housekeeper, who seemed to have taken a fancy to me, remained in conversation. Our talk was one-sided, and it required the services of an interpreter—the little maid who served me. She had learned much English in her father's shop in town.

The old woman had lived all her days in the hacienda—as her father had before her—and her father had belonged for hundreds of years to a grand Spanish family. It paid the owners a vast revenue annually, but not one of them had ever cared enough about the place to visit it!

The old lady grew wary and looked around for eavesdroppers. At least, not until lately, had any grand personage taken an interest in the hacienda. But since the armistice, an agent had come to see why the revenues had stopped, as they had with the war. The new hacienda was a most wonderful man. Among his many extraordinary accomplishments was that of curing disease. Almost by magic, he had cured her—the speaker's of this—that—and other ailments. And she had suffered for years. "Verily, it is myself miracle," he said. "I was the only miracle. I am." She herself, at least a duke. I should see for myself. She would show me.

In the chapel of the hacienda was a grand painting which had been done long ago and set up on the altar hundreds of years ago. There had been found again, and uncovered. This was in her own time, praise be to her patron saint!

The donor carried the picture, and his wife and his child, and the boy towers of the hacienda, too!

So she patterned on, while I listened for the whirr of a big beetle in the blue above me, and felt rather glad that the dame's imagination provided her with such delightful topics to tell. I should see for myself, he would return in the evening, and I must go to the chapel, at once. I followed her to the chapel and the little maid pulled aside the fringed silk curtain from the altar piece. It was a triptych and in one panel, looking down at me from a gorgeous gold frame, was a magnificent portrait of a man in a military uniform. The figure was clad in the gorgeous costume of an ancient day.

Mexico is a land of many superstitions. The old lady had more than her share of them. I told myself, but my very best band of Yankee common sense could not keep me from shuddering. I wanted to be alone. I sent the woman and the maid off to their sisters while I went back to guard the bleaching linen, and to deplore the fact that if Jim came and swooped down and swooped me up, I was a chariot of fire—I would have to prove the truth of the old wife's tale.

Several operators to-day declared their willingness to accept whatever the Government might offer. With the entire country around to the end of the spring, the right of the Government on a normal basis, neither the mines nor the owners of the properties, they said, could afford to turn a deaf ear to recommendations of the Government.

At the situation now stands as regards wages, the operators have offered an increase of 25 per cent. and the miners have agreed to accept the 31 per cent. proposal by Secretary Wilson. The possibility of a compromise between these figures, part of last year's figures, paid by the public in higher prices and some to come out of the margin

Commissioner Hodgins Presents Report of His Two Years' Work

Detention Home for Women
Defectives of Child-Bearing Age.

A far-reaching policy for the care and control of the mentally defective and feeble-minded of Ontario is outlined in the report presented to the Government by Mr. Justice Hodgins, who for two years past has been devoting himself to a careful study of the whole problem of the mentally sub-normal in the Province. The report, with evidence and appendices, occupies a large volume, and is regarded as one of the most important state papers ever presented to the Government of Ontario.

The Commissioner makes his recommendations under twenty headings, the most important of which may be summarized as follows: The formation of a Board of Control or a Departmental Committee under the Provincial Secretary, with the appointment of an Inspector of Mental Defectives as an independent official in the Provincial Secretary's Department.

The establishment of a properly equipped psychiatric hospital. The enlargement of the scheme of Juvenile Detention.

The opening of a parent institution similar to that at Orillia, in the north-western part of the Province. The colony system could be applied, and the extension of the colony system in connection with the Orillia institution.

SPECIAL TRAINING CLASSES

By Boards of Education and school trustees of special training classes for the defective and feeble-minded of the Province, and the establishment of a Provincial scheme of education, and provision for training the defective and feeble-minded in connection with the work.

The recognition of the need of skilled medical advice in regard to mental defects in dealing with all criminal cases and the establishment of proper clinics attached to or available to the courts administering criminal justice.

The establishment of suitable mental hospitals. Prompt dealing with degenerate settlements.

The balance of the recommendations deal with suggested legislation necessary to carry out the scheme as outlined.

The Commissioner in emphasizing the importance of the problem of mental deficiency has never been more fully appreciated than in a practical manner by the public. If the cardinal fact could be assimilated, the elimination of the mental defective from the school, the street, and from the agencies engaged in the care of the defective, would be the efforts of teachers and social workers comparatively easy and empty.

It is a hard fact, however, that the time taken in time being comparative. It is a hard fact, however, that the time taken in time being comparative. It is a hard fact, however, that the time taken in time being comparative.

Of the reforms recommended, several are considered by the Commissioner as being of the greatest importance. The creation of special classes for mental defectives, the transfer to Orillia of all "retarded" children, the removal of all "retarded" children to the Children's Aid Society, the establishment of a psychiatric hospital, and the provision of temporary quarters for the care of those whose tendencies are a menace to the community.

MENTAL TEST OF PUPILS

In dealing with the value of school training, Justice Hodgins declares that the future solution of the greater part of the problem lies in the schools. It is there that the most useful work can be done in ascertaining the mental condition of the children.

It is necessary, however, he points out, to have a well organized scheme with a staff of trained teachers, and to have for all pupils a mental test of the children in need of special instruction.

Upon this point the Commissioner has made it plain that the mental test of pupils is a necessary part of the school system.

It is all right to be a good miner, but the bartender is out of a job.

ENGINEER GIVES OUT THE FACTS

Thomas Jennings Makes An Actual Gain of Seventeen Pounds.

"The best proof I can give that this was the right thing for me to do was the relief my suffering and the fact that I gained seventeen pounds in weight. I had lost twenty pounds in weight, and I now balance the scales at one hundred and thirty-seven, making an actual gain of seventeen pounds, all from the use of five bottles of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

"At the time I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I weighed one hundred and twenty pounds. I now balance the scales at one hundred and thirty-seven, making an actual gain of seventeen pounds, all from the use of five bottles of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

"I was suffering from a bad case of stomach trouble and a general weakness of the system, and the result of a severe attack of typhoid fever. I had lost twenty pounds in weight, and I now balance the scales at one hundred and thirty-seven, making an actual gain of seventeen pounds, all from the use of five bottles of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

SENTIMENT LITTLE BITTER

Liquidation Has Helped the Technical Position.

(Supplied by J. C. Beary & Co., 17 State Street, old, members New York Stock Exchange.)
New York, Nov. 24.—Apparently the market is not in a mood to test the credit position, fundamentally, which is in a better position. Although sentiment is lower, it is feared that any general rise would bring a stiffening in rates. Week-end news developments were unimportant, and a trading market is likely to continue, with a somewhat better than it was a week ago.

SUMMARY.
Feature of talk on Saturday was assurance of antitrust expression by bankers, which was taken by some to mean a change in the bank policy. Others continued to insist that any such activities of government will be regarded with disfavor and new measures must be taken to prevent such advances are caused by manipulation.

Importance attached to decrease of more than sixty millions in loans shown in the actual bank statement. Technical position of the market has been strengthened materially by the liquidation of the market and the large loan interest.

American Steeling line in force considerable discussion because of expected benefits from the high silver price.

S. Rubber and other rubber shares also favored with the assurance that strong interests had been buying recently.

Improvement in France and tree near the close was the feature of the exchange market Saturday.

President of American Railway Foundry Co. says that France and Belgium need $200,000,000 of railroad equipment at once.

Herald says that Carlo Gatti has been slated for election as president of the Union Pacific.

Despatch from Pittsburgh estimates that the cost of the steel strike will be approximately $200,000,000. Many mills running at 100 per cent.

WENT HIGHER AT THE CLOSE

Grain Market Advanced On Strength.

Liquidation in Oats Was Lighter.

(Supplied by J. C. Beary & Co., 17 State Street, old, members New York Stock Exchange.)
Chicago, Nov. 24.—A lack of influential selling of corn futures and a decided disposition on the part of local shorts to stand any punishment was responsible for the advance and higher prices of the grain market today. In cash values, as was expected by cash traders. As one of the traders said, "We think more of our banked cash than of our options, hence we were disposed to hold more than 14 to 15¢ loss. News of 120,000 bushels of corn being taken at the board for export came when prices were around the lowest. It was so unusual in heat of operation that traders were easily intimidated into covering although there was no other news of a bullish character.

Liquidation in December oats was of lighter volume Saturday, although the discount under May dropped to 1 1/2¢, to note on proposed increase in stock from $45,000,000 to $50,000,000.

Wheat advanced to 20¢, 20¢ per cent. was increase to 10¢, 10¢ per cent. at 21¢ per cent. increase asked in wheat and refuse. No trade was ordered by Government.
